Not a vegetable in sight.

Maybe Next Year

By Judy Hodgson

hodgson@northcoastjournal.com

I think we can all agree that last week was a particularly bad week for news.

I wasn't in Dallas, but I was in Texas — in Austin at the annual convention of the Association of Alternative Newsmedia, eating chicken-fried steak, black-eyed peas and ... well, there's always a side of gummy mac and cheese. (Not a vegetable in sight.) It's a once-a-year gathering where we go to listen, learn and share with others in the newspaper industry. I noticed during sessions on copyright issues, integrated marketing and financial standards, my colleagues were checking their phones more frequently than normal. Something bad was happening.

AAN started officially in 1978 in Seattle when 30 alt papers from across the country came together to form an organization, newspapers that practiced journalism with a certain evangelical zeal. At that inaugural meeting was the Village Voice, the very first urban tabloid in the U.S. founded by Norman Mailer, among others, in the year 1955. (Early writers for the Voice included Ezra Pound, Henry Miller and E.E. Cummings.) The San Francisco Bay Guardian (1966) co-founders — Bruce Brugmann and his wife Jean Dibble — were there. The Wikipedia listing says SFBG was known for "reporting, celebrating, and promoting left-wing and progressive issues within San Francisco ... [which] usually included muck-raking." A group of college friends started the Chicago Reader in 1971, a paper that became known for its coverage of the arts, particularly film and theater, in addition to its literary, long-form journalism. Willamette Week (1974), which eventually became the first weekly to win a Pulitzer Prize for Investigative Reporting, was represented, as was the Seattle Weekly, host of that 1978 meeting, which came just two years after the paper's launch.

In the 1980s and 1990s, alternative newspapers sprung up across the U.S. and later, Canada, not just in urban areas but in progressive communities with universities nearby. The North Coast Journal began publishing in 1990. We've been an AAN member since shortly after going weekly in 1998.

Market changes have been particularly harsh on the newspaper industry over the past two decades. First, entire groups of advertisers found other ways to deliver their messages. Grocery stores went to inserts or direct mail; car dealers to TV; cigarette manufacturers, big spenders in the 1990s, went somewhere. (Overseas, I think.) Classified revenue, which once accounted for 30 to 40 percent of the revenue of free alt weeklies, disappeared almost overnight as Craigslist moved from urban markets into university towns. More recently, bloggers and web-only competitors sprung up and gained entry to the news biz without the heavy costs of printing, distribution and, often, real reporters.

What I found last week at the conference were the survivors, those who adapted to changing technology while they navigated through the biggest recession to ever hit this country short of the Great Depression.

Today, profit margins are slim but they are there, as we learned in our financial standards class. More importantly, these alts are still doing some amazing, kick-ass journalism — each in their own communities, big and small.

The conference ended with an awards ceremony where we all patted ourselves on the back. The winners are handed a plaque and a shot of tequila. If you're web browsing, here's the link to all the finalists: <http://altnewsmedia.wpengine.com/aan/2016-aan-awards-winners-announced/#cash>

In addition to feature writing, arts criticism, design, political columns, etc., AAN has awards for things like LGBT coverage. This year's winner, NUVO of Indianapolis, published a riveting story about a deaf transgender boy, born to deaf parents.

It's called "Trans Athlete." (Trust me: It's one fantastic read.) On race reporting, the prize went to the Washington City Paper for "Where the Sidewalk Ends," a story about how very often residents of our nation's capital get arrested just for standing outside their apartments or homes. Basically, for occupying a sidewalk.

The Journal was a finalist for the Free Speech award for our continuing attempt to obtain a police video of an EPD incident involving the arrest of a 14-year-old boy in 2014. But the prize went to the Monterey County Weekly for "True Confessions: The Case of Father Edward Fitz-Henry." Publisher/owner Bradley Zeve told me the paper was tied up in court fighting the local Catholic diocese for more than two years. At huge expense. Eventually MC Weekly won the right to examine court documents that should have been available all along. But, unfortunately, they were not reimbursed attorney fees.

So I didn't get that shot of tequila this year on behalf of the Journal editorial team. It's all good. We're proud nonetheless.

Maybe next year, when the AAN conference is in D.C. We'll be there.

'Affordable,' Really?

Editor:

I have dealt with several realtors who were as shady as lawyers (Mailbox, July 7). Realtors rarely report other bad agents. When was the last time anyone ever heard of any lawyer or doctor reporting one of their fellows? That would be a big, fat never. They don't do it because anyone who "tattles" would be ostracized.

Realtors can't do a darn thing about "affordable" housing.

Who defines what "affordable" may mean? My price for affordable housing would vastly differ from any realtor. There are no reasonably, sanely priced houses. There will never be. It's a 'merican dream morphed into a nightmare.

Building more housing isn't the answer. All freshly built housing does is put more structures onto the inflated market. Materials and labor these days destroy any sense of affordability. More housing does not mean lower prices. In the big picture, Humboldt County does not now and will never have the infrastructure of water and land to build enough housing, especially any that could be jokingly called affordable.

From the NCJ: "While mobile home parks have been recognized as important in terms of affordable housing, there's been a national trend of investors buying mobile home parks and raising the rents beyond affordability for residents."

See "Trailer Park Transcendence," July 7, 2006.

The only affordable housing available are manufactured houses, usually located in what are ironically called "parks." Those possibilities are disappearing as park owners are selling to greedy corporations. Rents skyrocket. Where are any realtors fighting that battle for affordability? Nowhere to be seen.

Since no supervisor has expressed a desire to help lower income folks, a citizens group collected petition signatures placing a rent control ordinance on the ballot this fall. (Learn more at www.humboldtmobile-home.org.)

This ordinance would only pertain to unincorporated county areas and only mobile home owners.

Gambling with our Lives

Editor:

OK ... We have brought flowers, lit candles, written notes, cried, and sung (NCJ Daily, June 16). The politicians, police, FBI, and hospital personnel have all congratulated each other for doing a fine job for the media. Forty-nine of our fellow citizens have been slaughtered. The president's speech following the massacre lectured us that we need more gun laws and that "hate" speech was to blame for Orlando. infamous “that’s-not-us” speech that he has used to try to shame us on many occasions. Our government is saying “Move on ... this is the new normal. Every so often a radical Islamist terrorist will kill 50 or 100 or 200. Get used to it.” The media obediently follows.

Congressman Jared Huffman, with other gun control Democrats, put on a Springer-type show with a sophomoric sit-in shamefully imitating the heroes of our civil rights movement to the point of singing spiritual hymns but changing the words for gun laws (NCJ Daily, June 30). How about actually letting the border control enforce the borders so we might actually stop at least some terrorists from entering our country and killing us? The DOJ/FBI are stunningly still looking for a motive in Orlando even though the murderer called 9-1-1 and basically dedicated his kill to ISIS. Both the FBI and CIA have stated they have no idea who is coming across our borders and have no doubt terrorists will be part of the 10,000 refugees President Obama wants to bring into our country. Hillary wants to bring in six times that. There are “watch lists” in every state.

Terry Torgerson

Is our leadership crazy? Our governments are gambling with our lives for no other reason but to stay in power; for votes. Time for new leadership that will protect us and stop these insane policies.

Predicting the Unpredictable

Humboldt firefighters weigh in on the 2016 fire season

By Linda Stansberry
linda@northcoastjournal.com

A decent winter's rain does not mean an easy season for firefighters. True, this last year capped a record-breaking four-year drought with a moderately wet El Niño, but the drought, according to meteorologists, is not over. The aquifers and snowpacks are far from replenished and the woods and fields are drying out. According to Cal Fire data, there have been 104 major fire incidents in the last seven months, mostly in Southern California, and a major timber die-off caused by bark beetles in the Sierra Nevadas has created a tinderbox of dry fuel. The North Coast has been favored by a slightly higher rainfall than the rest of the state, but experts are still advising that water be used sparingly, chiefs are preparing crews and equipment to battle with the flames, and contract and seasonal workers are waiting for phone calls directing them to drive to the fireline. "I haven't been out yet. I'm jumping from one foot to the next," says Ken Richardson, who augments his retirement income by running supplies as an independent contractor during fire season. His wife Carlene has already been called out to work at a fire near Tahoe, leaving Ken to wait by the phone. When the call comes — and it may come at any time, from anywhere in the state — he will fire up the truck and get on the road. The work can be grueling, 16-hour days on the road, with food from makeshift fire camp cafeterias and short nights in bunks or trailers under smoky skies, but on a good year, when contractors are in demand, ambitious parties like the Richardsons can clear $20,000 or more for a few months' work. State and national agencies are also preparing. There were seven major incidents in the upper third of the state by this time last year, but 2016 has gotten off to a slow start, with only two significant fires in the region: the Pony Fire, near Happy Camp (2,858 acres and 90-percent contained as of press time) and the Wilderness Fire in the Marble Mountains (34 acres, completely contained). Despite its small size, the latter was troublesome due to the steep terrain and remote location. It is alleged to have started after a camp or signal fire set by two missing hikers went astray, but the Six Rivers National Forest Service was unable to confirm this, saying only that its cause is under investigation. What they could confirm is that while there has been little fire activity so far, how the season will shake out is anybody's guess.

menu of menus

The North Coast's Complete Restaurant Directory

“We certainly have potential in terms of our conditions to have some large fire activity this year,” says Mike Minton, fire chief for Six Rivers. “We had a pretty average winter which certainly helps with our drought conditions, but we also had a drier than normal spring.”

Minton adds that the rain has meant extra grass in fuel beds – flammable organic material – for the fires, but conditions aren’t nearly as dry as they were last year (in 2015 he said fuel loads were the worst he had seen in nine years). The extra water means extra resources for helicopters that might be dipping into streams. And as to where a fire might break out, it’s all a guessing game. The Orleans area is very dry; the Del Norte and Smith River areas are the most moisture-rich. History is also a predictor of vulnerability; areas that haven’t burned in many years or that burned in a particular way can accumulate more fuel, improving the chances that more fires will start in their footprint. One area of particular concern for Minton and his cohort is the footprint of the 1999 Megram Fire in the Trinity Alps Wilderness. The fire, which raged to 125,000 acres, burned hot and left many large diameter dead trees, creating conditions that exacerbated the 2009 Backbone Fire (6,324 acres) and the 2013 Corral Complex (12,295 acres).

Last year, a late July lightning storm and sudden flare ups of several major fires in the region created a shortage of hotel rooms for support staff in Eureka. Minton says those conditions are unlikely to reoccur; his agency has finished hiring its normal amount of seasonal personnel and did not see any budget changes.

Cal Fire, a state agency, did receive a boost of $77 million for extra staff, equipment and educators this year, due to the drought emergency declaration. Hugh Scanlon, chief of Cal Fire’s Humboldt-Del Norte Unit, confirmed that his unit made 17 extra seasonal hires. Scanlon says the rain was also a boon, but adds that this is no time to get complacent.

“At this point, unless we get significant rain, we can continue to see significant fire risk,” he says.

Toward the end of this month most fuels will transition, losing retained moisture. And while technology can go a long way towards predicting weather trends, Scanlon calls lightning “a wild card.”

“There are really few good predictive models,” he says. “When we start to see tropical moisture that starts to push into our area from Mexico, we can see some of that activity come into our area.”

Scanlon says his “confidence is high,” as last year 90 percent of lightning downstrikes caused fire; this year’s extra moisture should mean a much lower percentage, and his team is ready for what may come.

In the meantime, Cal Fire, Six Rivers, Ken and Carlene Richardson and thousands of others across the state are preparing for the vagaries of nature. Among speculators, there is a weighing of checks and balances: extra moisture vs. extra fuel, a wet El Niño winter vs. above-average summer temperatures, extra firefighters vs. the rumble of thunder and the promise of lightning.

“What kind of fire season are we going to have?” Scanlon says. “I’ll tell you for sure in November.”

Some Reflections on Firefighting

By Justin White

The California Conservation Corps, which hires and trains young people ages 18 to 25 (and military veterans up to age 29), recently turned 40. This year the Fortuna CCC center trained 38 new corpsmembers to be firefighters and provide fire camp support.

The CCC’s motto is “hard work, low pay, miserable conditions ... and more!” Fire season, which sees especially miserable conditions and hard work, is nevertheless a welcome time for many corpsmembers, with extra pay and a chance to shine in front of potential future employers. Three of last year’s Fortuna trainees went on to jobs with the U.S. Forest Service, and one was hired on a private engine.

Justin White, who worked on last year’s Lassic Fire and is now beginning his second year on the CCC’s fire crew, sent us his thoughts:

Early mornings, hot days, long nights and a little sense of belonging.

If you think you’re in shape to be a firefighter, I’d encourage you to think again.

Early mornings, hot days, long nights and a happier bank account.

Some days are long, some seem to fly, but every day on the fireline is a learning opportunity and a chance to grow.

There are some jobs out there where you are sitting in a chair the majority of the day. Out on the fireline, when you get a few minutes to find a flat enough rock to sit on, you can sit with a sense of earning that rock.

Being a firefighter is not easy. Everyone seems to think that firefighters have it made and our job is really cool. Little do they know that it really sucks. But for the proud few that choose to earn the title of a firefighter, we would not have any other job in the world. It is one you learn to love more than anything else.

When you’re a firefighter, there are two things you look forward to in a day, other than the fire itself. One is taking your boots off at the end of the day. Which in some cases, may not be until the next day. The second is lunch, which also in some cases may not come until you’re waiting for dinner.

When you’re a firefighter, there are a few rules to live by. One: Don’t mouth off to anyone outranking you. Two: It is always day one. And three: It isn’t over until you’re in your sleeping bag, and even then it may not be.

Some days, the hardest part of being a firefighter is putting your boots on in the morning.

Pot Not the New Almond

Linda Stansberry
newsroom@northcoastjournal.com

How much marijuana is being grown in Humboldt County? We've all heard some store porch supposition on the subject, but there's little actual data to back it up. A recent article, published in the April edition of Environmental Research Letters, may help fill this vacuum.

University of California Berkeley research specialist Van Butsic, and Jacob C. Brenner, a professor at Ithaca College, spent almost a year analyzing satellite imagery from Humboldt County, counting greenhouses and extrapolating to come up with a figure of 4,428 grow sites spread over 60 watersheds. The project was inspired by what the researchers called "an urgent need for systemic empirical research."

"We were just interested in what's out there," Butsic said in a phone interview. "There were a lot of sensational articles. There was not a lot of evidence."

The team analyzed the images from the falls of 2012 and 2013, when plants would be easiest to spot. When they found a greenhouse, they flipped back through previous years to see how long it had been there. Their count estimated a 19-fold increase in greenhouses between 2004 and 2014. How do they know that these greenhouses were being used for weed? Common sense, the study posits – there was a simultaneous decrease in nursery crop production over those years. What else would they be used for? Greenhouse grows, according to the article, contain an average of about 86 plants, while outdoor grows contain about 45. Altogether, that adds up to an estimated 297,954 plants. So, we asked Butsic, are these numbers crazy?

"Not really," he said. "The main take home is that, as of 2012-2013, the total amount of land and water use for marijuana cultivation is actually quite small compared to other agricultural uses. That being said, the areas where it's taking place are not conducive for agriculture."

In other words, in the big picture, pot in Humboldt County is not sucking up the same amount of water large commercial agriculture operations might be. But it is being grown on increasingly subdivided parcels, on steep and eroding slopes, near sensitive fish habitat and out of sight from the kind of regulators who would, ostensibly, blow the whistle on this nonsense were it alfalfa or oranges.

Butsic said that calling pot "the new almond," as the New York Times once did, is a false analogy. But the water being used for marijuana is "coming from more complex circumstances" than traditional agriculture. And the study, as enlightening as it is, has some limitations. It assumes only one crop per year, but we know many cannabis farmers are doing multiple crops. And the research was conducted before the recent medical cannabis ordinance, which has brought a subsequent rush of new growers. Butsic confirmed that he is seeking funding for a new study that will compare production from the last four years. ●

"Total stocks of land and water resources consumed by cannabis agriculture are not in themselves troubling. Rather, it is the spatial distribution of cannabis agriculture that determines environmental harm."

True Ward, or not True Ward?

Eureka voters and their representatives appear to be fairly fired up about democracy, although they have different opinions of how that democracy is best expressed.

This was apparent in during city council's July 5 meeting, in which the council voted 3-2, with Marian Brady and Melinda Ciarabellini dissenting, to put an item on the November ballot that would have voters decide whether the city should shift to a true ward system. As previously reported, the city currently has a strange hybrid system, in which councilmembers are required to live in the ward they represent, but are voted in by the city at large. A switch to a true ward system would mean councilmembers in a particular ward could only be voted in by residents of that ward.

Such a move would also shield the city from potential litigation, said Eureka City Attorney Cyndy Day-Wilson. During the meeting, Day-Wilson cited other cases in which cities were sued for inadequate representation of minorities.

Public comment was largely split on the issue, with a few former and future council hopefuls weighing in. One speaker referenced the Bernie Sanders campaign, while another stated "If it ain't broke, don't fix it."

When discussion reverted back to the councilmembers, things got a little heated. Councilmember Natalie Arroyo said that, despite representing a district with a high proportion of Latino and Hmong voters, the majority of people who appealed to her for representation were older and white. She expressed support for the idea of a true ward system. Councilmember Kim Bergel voiced cautious agreement but also asked for a second look at the "ridiculous" delineations of the wards as they're currently drawn.

Ciarabellini said she found the measure unnecessary. Yes, cities had been sued, but all cities significantly larger than Eureka. "I have a problem putting something on the ballot without actually mentioning whether we're actually doing racially polarized elections," she said. "Where's the fire? Does it have to happen right now?"

Brady alleged that the move was "coercion," and expressed dismay at the money that would potentially go toward nailing down which voters belonged to which wards, heaping responsibility for the resolution onto Councilmember Linda Atkins.

Atkins, visibly annoyed, said the discussion of the ward system was prioritized during the city's strategic planning session and that Brady "hadn't paid attention."

The resolution ultimately passed, meaning this November Eureka voters can check a little box to decide which system they'd prefer. Two other resolutions that drew some controversy, including an amendment to the Shelter Crisis Resolution that added two more sites to the list of approved areas for overnight homeless camping, and a resolution that could raise the cap in government-subsidized low-income housing, were approved unanimously.

Humboldt Responds

Readers begin a dialogue on race, policing and the deadly toll of a tragic week

By Thadeus Greenson

We on the North Coast watched intently, tied to our televisions, radios and news feeds this week as more painful stitches were added to the fabric of this nation's history. We watched as parallel tragedies unfolded in Minnesota and Louisiana, where black men were killed by police bullets, adding fresh urgency to the steady boil of the Black Lives Matter movement. Then, we looked on dumbstruck as a sniper's bullets killed five Dallas police officers who'd been watching over an otherwise peaceful protest. Demonstrations, vigils and acts of civil disobedience followed in communities across the nation, including our own.

These events were instantly added to the complex tangle of this nation's legacies of institutionalized classism, racism and gun violence. News of each of the shootings — complete with amateur video footage that found its way to the Internet — has been parsed and filtered, used by many simply to buttress long-held biases and beliefs. What's been largely missing over the past week is an honest and open dialogue about these events and what they mean and how we can learn from them and keep them from repeating over and over and over again.

It's a difficult conversation, to be sure, one that's daunting in its scope and in the need to stray from worn paradigms of good and evil, black and white, justified and criminal. It's a conversation that seemingly has no bounds: set against the backdrop of a nation built on slavery; the reverberating impacts of a failed war on drugs that has criminalized addicts, turned neighborhoods into war zones and led to generational animosity between police and portions of the communities they serve; the troubling escalation of all forms of gun violence in this country (as of press time, the country had seen 28,063 separate incidents so far this year,

"A man is dead
because he had a broken
taillight."

— Dave Rosso

Mike Grimaldo, of Fortuna, held a flag with a blue stripe at the candlelight vigil in Fortuna. "The Thin Blue Line" is a symbol used to commemorate fallen law enforcement officers and to symbolize the role of law enforcement as the protectors of fellow citizens from criminal elements, according to Wikipedia.

according to the nonprofit Gun Violence Archive); and ongoing mental health and addiction crises playing out in slow motion in communities throughout the nation to devastating consequences.

Again, it's daunting, and it's difficult to know where to start. But, as a reporter, I do see some desperately needed first steps. We need better data to track these fatal altercations so we can sort them out and analyze them to better understand how they happen and who they happen to. We need police agencies as a whole to be more transparent, to have the courage to openly discuss these incidents and how they could have been handled differently, to treat them as painful opportunities for growth rather than simply as exposures to liability. And we as citizens need to understand that we are placing an ever growing burden on our officers, asking them to double as mental health clinicians and social workers, and recognize that humans are fallible and mistakes will be made.

And most of all, we need to listen to each other, understanding that our futures are intrinsically tied. If we're going to loosen the tangle in which history has left us, we must do it together: honestly, thoughtfully and with optimism.

In that vein, we asked you readers to weigh in on the issue. We wanted to hear your frustration, grief, support and solutions in order to start a local dialogue. Here's what you told us.

Flashbacks

It has been a very depressing week that has taken me back to the 1960s. Race riots, cities burning, assassinations of President Kennedy, Malcolm X, Martin Luther King, Bobby Kennedy and, in 1970, the Kent State shootings. I started paying attention to politics in 1960 with Kennedy and I have never seen an uglier, more childish primary year than this one. And it is the campaigning on one side that has brought out much of the anger, racism, hatred and ugliness we are seeing now.

The most recent killings of black men by police should never have happened. And the shooting of the Dallas police never should have happened. Hatred leads to more hatred. But to watch videos of cops on top of a man who is face down on the ground shooting that man, and of a cop shooting a man four times while he sits in his car, just left me devastated.

There is a need for much better training of police officers in the use of weapons and their conduct. A man is dead because he had a broken taillight. Why didn't the cop just pull him over and ask him if he knew his taillight was broken and urge him to get it fixed? Individuals do things that sometimes cast very dark shadows on all of their colleagues. And members of the Dallas police force paid for it.

None of this was necessary. None of it.

Deeper Problems

The Dallas murders remind me of the dangers that police officers face every day, even here in Humboldt County. They never know when someone they've pulled over is going to try to shoot them, stab them or run them over. A California Highway Patrol officer was nearly killed a while back by a young man in Hoopa who the officer was trying to assist. Officers working for the district attorney were recently shot at in Eureka by someone they were trying to interview for a case.

Local officers get paid significantly less than those in most California cities and counties, so I'm doubly grateful that these men and women are willing to take on the dangerous, difficult work of protecting me, my family, my neighbors and my community.

I also support the Black Lives Matter movement, and its demands that police agencies and individual officers dig deeper into their biases and commit to treating people fairly and equally. As Eureka Police Chief Andy Mills stated in an editorial last week, Black Lives Matter is a response to the experiences of "prejudice and abuse" of people of color.

Sometimes it's hard to reconcile these perspectives. The actions of the Dallas killer support the views of people who says there's a war going on between black Americans and the police.

We can't succumb to that thinking. As President Obama said last week, "The vast majority of police officers are doing a really good job and are trying to protect people and do so fairly." It's also important to remember what Obama said in an earlier speech on police killings. In poor communities, police officers are tasked with the impossible: protecting people in neighborhoods decimated by poverty, hopelessness and violence.

Those deeper problems must be solved, and that's a job for more than the police.

Jim Hight, Eureka

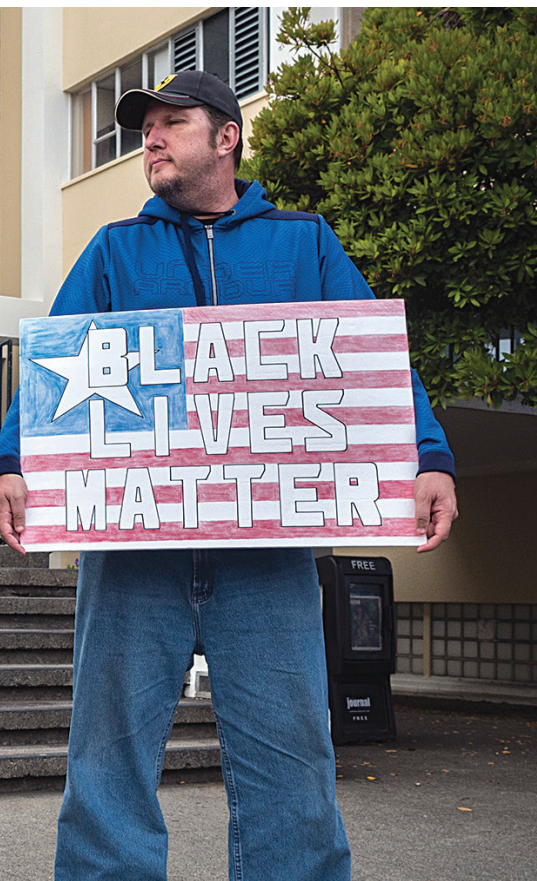

"As long as the powers in D.C. continue to be ruled by the gun lobby and the ultra rich, there will be nothing done."

—Robert Thoman

When Will it Stop?

As long as the powers in D.C. continue to be ruled by the gun lobby and the ultra rich, there will be nothing done. They can't even eliminate people on the no-fly list from buying assault weapons. Nobody should be able to buy a gun without a full check of their records.

Jenny Brown, of Trinidad, and Marc McGowan, of Eureka, brought their hand-made signs to the Solidarity Vigil at the county courthouse in Eureka on July 11. "I'm here grieving the loss of any life in these tragedies," said McGowan. "It's important for me as a white person to stand up for others of any race."

Many years ago our then governor, Ronald Reagan, slashed funding for mental health. So now we have crazy people running around buying guns and killing people. After the killing of officers in Dallas, I can understand why the police are afraid. I just wish they would shoot to injure rather than shooting somebody several times if they are black and carrying a stick or a knife. They need better training. There are many outstanding police personnel but the only ones we hear about are the bad ones.

The Dallas killer had a huge arsenal. How do we stop that?

People are fed up with the job that our legislators are doing as they spend most of their time fundraising. When will the killing stop? When will we spend some money helping out people with mental problems?

Robert Thoman, McKinleyville

Eureka Police Chief Andrew Mills and other EPD officers attended the Solidarity Vigil in Eureka.

Weed them Out

Police are not policing their own, therefore, jeopardizing the good cops. Get rid of bad cops. ... Stop giving them "leave with pay" and make sure they are prosecuted quickly.

Ellen Bryant, Eureka

A Long Road

How have we gotten here? How do we live in a time where a man can be shot at a traffic stop, while his girlfriend and her 4-year-old child sit in the car? How do we live in a world stewing with so much hatred a man will open fire on anyone, citing his need for violence? How has violence become the only tool for humans to voice themselves?

These events are tragic, but are a common thread in the story of America. We mustn't forget that the Civil Rights Movement gained momentum when America saw the lynching of Emmett Till in 1955, when Rodney King faced violent brutality from the hands of law enforcement in 1991, or when an innocent teenager, Eugene Williams, was drowned for swimming in 1919, and the list, upsettingly, goes on.

The power of these events is when humanity comes together to seek fundamental understanding, stand in solidarity, and incite change through dialogue and policy. This cannot be a common thread of history for much longer. We cannot keep losing members of our global family. The wounds of war run deep, and it's sad we have to keep fighting for survival, Tamara McFarland, of Bayside, one of the informal organizers of the "Solidarity Vigil for Our Beloved Community," arrived early to place 11 framed portraits of black people recently killed by police and the slain Dallas officers on the county courthouse steps in Eureka.

but we mustn't give up.

Everyone is a part of this; everyone has a part in this. We have a long road ahead, but humanity is tuning in and defining its voice. Among all this fighting between parties, movements, ideologies, don't forget to listen. The human struggle from oppression is calling our names and we have the power to change the world as we see fit. When we listen to people of the world and their stories of oppression, we can start to change the ailments of our society. When we listen to each other, we change our perceptions of the world.

Elizabeth Phillips, Eureka

Shame on You

I'm so angry. Another unarmed black man killed by police officers.

To my white brothers and sisters (I'm half-white, half brown, but blend well in white society), who refuse to see the pain, to acknowledge the racist history that created this country, who refuse to believe, who do not try to empathize, who continue to ignore police brutality when video clearly confirms what voices from communities of color have been saying for generations: Shame on you! And to those who do have an understanding and yet say nothing, shame on you, too!

To the deniers of reality, you cause me to feel shame about my race; not guilt, because I don't stand by and let it happen — the joke, the comment, the racist action. I say something, so shame is what you make me feel.

My white uncle was a police officer for 25 years and never shot a human being, even when he worked in a predominantly black neighborhood. Of course, not all police officers are bad, but that does not mean police brutality does not exist. Nor does it negate the outrage when officers are killed by snipers.

Why is it easy for me to empathize? I am an informed woman ... I have a fear in and outside of my home for myself and daughter, of being raped; I witnessed how my brown father was treated by those in authority, how teachers have treated my friends of color, and I know U.S. history ... police brutality has been a problem for a very long time.

So, when the majority stays silent, leaving it to only those who are oppressed to voice their outrage, you perpetuate the problem as equally as those who deny it exists. Stand up and use your white privilege by being an ally. Work on your — our — community for a change.

AJ Atienza, Arcata

Together we are Greater

Despite what some may claim as they seek to unfairly paint all cops as callous racists and murderers, I firmly believe the vast majority of law enforcement officers are caring professionals who stand ready and willing to risk their lives for others regardless of race, color or religion. brave Dallas officers who ran toward the sound of gunfire on July 7 and selflessly placed themselves between the gunman and civilians, even as the bodies of their fallen brothers lay in the street.

Black lives matter but "Blue" lives matter, too. All lives matter. The tremendous support we have been shown by so many in our community has been heartening and is deeply appreciated. I attended the candlelight vigil at Rohner Park in Fortuna on Friday night where, with little advance notice, nearly 200 people gathered to remember our fallen heroes in Dallas.

As we stood there together, a community united, I reflected upon how it is in the darkest moments like these that the light of courage, honor and sacrifice burns most fiercely. But I was also reminded that this light must be safeguarded from dark winds of hatred and hostility, just as we each carefully shielded the candles we held in our hands from the evening breeze. Hate extinguishes hope. As a community and a nation, we cannot surrender to fear, propaganda or animosity.

There can be no "them vs. us" as we serve and protect a public that needs us. We also need you. Together we are greater than these tragedies. And if we truly believe that Black Lives Matter and Blue Lives Matter and All Lives Matter, it is our solemn responsibility as a nation to prove it by recognizing inequity, abhorring reprehensible violence and bringing it to an end.

Steve Watson, Eureka police captain

They're Winning

The one-percenters are winning. Media are all asking why these tragedies are happening. But it's not a mystery. The oligarchy has been using race baiting as a fear mongering tactic for a long time. Our prisons are packed with the results. Blame-the-victim works and keeps the attention away from where it belongs. Our economy and our government are owned by a tiny handful of people with vast resources.

The working and lower-middle classes are being squeezed to the wall by an economy that long ago left them behind, and the messages from leadership and the media are clear about who's to blame. Trump says build a wall and keep those Mexicans out and the idiots cheer. So people of color are being killed by police and imprisoned at hugely inequitable rates. And — pay attention Chief Mills — those police are walking free and that sends a message to other police and to people of color, and the anger mounts and mounts. And those police don't even know that they're flunkies.

Everyone's surprised by Dallas. What surprises me is that it didn't happen sooner. But now the lid's off Pandoras' box and it will happen again. I wouldn't want to be at the funeral procession in Dallas, it could be a moving target.

The puppet masters in charge are pulling the strings and the politically, historically ignorant public is blindly doing their biddings. Progressives must work at educational outreach, at opening eyes, or nothing will change. Nothing is more important than creating an aware, educated citizenry that can look to where the real power brokers are and hold them accountable.

Sylvia De Rooy, Eureka

A Critical Role

The murder of police officers in Dallas and the senseless killing of a young African American man in Minnesota are the latest in the long list of tragedies that have left a deep wound on our collective spirit. After each tragedy we ask, why? Why did the police officer kill an unarmed person? What would motivate a young man to walk into a church and murder people at prayer? Why did a U.S. Army veteran who served his country murder five police officers?

We cannot help but be emotionally overwhelmed by each and every tragic and senseless event that results in the loss of innocent lives. It is good and healthy to demand answers as to why the things happen. It's also good to demand solutions and change. We should expect more of ourselves as human beings and we must demand that our leaders work together to find answers. However, the answers will be slow in coming and our political leaders appear to be mired in political maneuvering and blaming. That said, we must not allow ourselves to become lost in despair and desperation.

We cannot lose hope. We cannot give up. Instead, we must honor the lives that have been lost by renewing our individual commitment to developing meaningful ways to confront the real problems that threaten the well-being of our fellow Americans and the health of our nation. We must listen to one another with patience and a genuine desire to understand. We must speak out against violence, racism and hatred. We must learn about the lives of others. We must act in ways that promote peace and compassion for all people.

We cannot wait for everyone else to agree to do these things before we begin to do them ourselves. Each one of us must commit to doing these things now, today, tomorrow, and during all the days that follow. College of the Redwoods takes this responsibility very seriously.

We believe our students play a critical role in addressing the serious problems we face, and we will intensify our dedication to helping them develop the skills and values necessary for this important task. The board of trustees, administration, faculty and staff firmly believe that our students truly are our future. Caring for them is a sacred and solemn responsibility — one that we shoulder with pride and commitment.

Reduce the Rhetoric

Cops come in all sizes, levels, conditions and colors. Each brings skill sets to their job and none are Ninja fighters. Understand that mental health conditions, alcohol abuse and drug intoxication can alter police contacts as intoxicated people behave in ways they normally would not. As a young cop, I fought with men half my weight, yet it took four cops to pin them to the ground where they became susceptible to death by excited delirium. Throw a weapon in the mix, the incident gets a lot more complicated and dangerous for all.

Society asks young cops to intervene daily into volatile situations that are beyond the control of the public. I will not ask them to take unreasonable risk because someone decided to get wasted and put others at risk while armed. We ask officers to risk themselves in order to deescalate problems, and most often they are successful. Yet 990 people lost their lives last year while interacting with the police. The questions are why and how do we fix this? An objective look at data is necessary.

As a culture we need to look at data and reduce rhetoric. National Review posted an article on police shootings data. There is also a recent book published on a similar topic: In Context, Understanding Police Killings of Unarmed Civilians, which reviews 153 cases from 2015.

Here is where we should focus: Examine in detail police use of force data; have genuine discussions about race, imprisonment, justice and poverty; reform police leadership to be more transparent, including the release of video; open police files to oversight, even personnel files when legally permissible; encourage all police agencies to learn and practice de-escalation techniques; have a sincere discussion about mental health problems and the lack of resources, a topic for both presidential candidates.

The Many Lives of Strawberries

Sweet and savory and even in frittata

By Simona Carini

tabletalk@northcoastjournal.com

When I buy a basket of strawberries, I put my nose in them and inhale deeply. I smell sun, spring then summer, long days and warm weather. As a child in Italy, strawberry season always felt painfully short and therefore precious. In late March and early April, strawberries broke the monotony of winter fruit — apples, oranges, and mandarins — and heralded the arrival of my favorites: strawberries, cherries, figs, peaches and apricots. I still experience the same enthusiasm, even after 20 years in California, where we enjoy a long strawberry season.

When I see a child hugging a basket of strawberries with ruby-smeared fingers like his or her life depended on it, oblivious to the drop of juice slowly making its way down from chin to shirt, I remember what it was like.

I have eagerly adapted to months of strawberries and have developed a number of recipes to go along with my childhood favorite, which is eating them like the aforementioned child. My mother often turned strawberries into the classic Italian dessert fragole con la panna by lightly sweetening quartered strawberries, letting them rest for a short while and then crowning each portion with freshly whipped heavy cream.

A few years ago, after reading about oven-roasted strawberries in a blog, I upgraded my go-to recipe for strawberry ice cream flavored with balsamic vinegar by roasting the strawberries before using them. The delicious outcome put me on a path of further exploration. Not having a sweet tooth meant that I moved the experiments in the savory department. My first attempt, a pairing with roasted new potatoes, was unsuccessful, but the strawberries were not wasted: eating them convinced me even more of their potential as ingredient in a savory dish. Next came roasted strawberry frittata.

You read correctly and I am well aware that it sounds strange. It sounded strange to me, too, when the idea formed. In fact, I resisted it, but the strange idea turned into an excellent dish.

I have offered my roasted strawberry frittata to many guests and raised a number of eyebrows. But the frittata charms the palate from the first sweet and savory bite. It has everything: the sweetness of strawberries, the savoriness of cheese, the silkiness of eggs. Don't be shy, give it a try.

Roasted Strawberry Frittata

Select a cheese that has a little sweetness to it, such as Gouda, colby, comte or Havarti. Serves 4-6.

10 ounces strawberries
½ teaspoon balsamic vinegar
1 tablespoon olive oil
6 eggs
½ tablespoon strawberry juice
2 ½ tablespoons water
Fine sea salt
1 ounce cheese

Wash the whole strawberries and carve out their stems. Place the strawberries in a bowl, sprinkle the balsamic vinegar on them and toss gently.

Heat the oven to 350 F. Line a cookie sheet with a silicone baking mat that is wider and longer than the sheet. Place the strawberries on the sheet in a single layer.

Bake for 20 minutes. Remove the berries from the oven and let them cool slightly, then transfer them into a shallow bowl.

Measure ½ tablespoon of the juice released into the bowl as the berries rest, place it in a ramekin and add the water. (If there is more juice, let it cool and use it as condiment at the table.) Quarter the strawberries.

Coat the bottom of a 10-inch ovenproof skillet with the oil and warm it. Break the eggs in a bowl and lightly whisk until just blended. Add a couple of pinches of salt and whisk briefly. Add the prepared liquid and whisk lightly to incorporate it.

Pour the eggs slowly into the skillet. Gently slide the strawberries into the pan and distribute them evenly. Cook over low heat until the eggs are set.

In the meantime, turn on the broiler. Use the "low" setting if your oven has one, otherwise put the rack on the lowest position.

Grate the cheese. When the edge of the frittata is set run a thin spatula under it and shake the pan gently to ensure the bottom does not stick to the pan. Evenly distribute the cheese on the surface.

When the eggs are set, place the skillet in the oven for about 2 minutes, leaving the door ajar. (To counter fateful distraction, I recommend setting a timer.) The frittata will puff up slightly and complete cooking.

Take the skillet out of the oven (don't forget that the handle is hot) and let the frittata rest for a few minutes before sliding it onto a serving plate. Cut into wedges and serve.

You can store leftovers in the refrigerator and enjoy them the following day at room temperature.

It's All About the Egg

Blood spatter, quiche porn and women kissing at Redwood Curtain

By Pat Bitton

It's the superficially idyllic 1950s in post-war Middle America. The role of women is to be decorative and do good works. Lesbianism does not exist (after all, Queen Victoria said so). The only dark cloud threatening this Eden is the Red Menace.

And so it is that we find ourselves, as members of the audience, among the invited guests at the annual quiche breakfast organized by the Susan B. Anthony Society for the Sisters of Gertrude Stein — hosted this year by Redwood Curtain Theatre, in the form of the theatre's latest production, Five Lesbians Eating a Quiche, by Evan Linder and Andrew Hobgood.

The officers of the society greet audience members as they enter the auditorium, handing out pre-printed name tags. No-one escapes, and one lucky guest will be assigned the role of the member who “fell from grace” (relax — no actual participation is required). The society's motto is “no men, no meat, all manners,” and the rules of etiquette are fiercely enforced at the annual celebration of all things eggy.

But just as we're all settling into what seems to be simply a charming period piece, all hell (or perhaps that should be “heck”?) breaks loose when the atomic attack alert goes off, and the ladies' layers of polite social niceties gradually strip away. What follows involves various stages of undress, blood spattering on windows, ladies kissing, what can only be described as quiche porn, and a whole new role for the egg that I won't reveal here.

The eponymous lesbians (or “widows,” as they are introduced to us) are well-cast, and each successfully develops her own distinct personality. Natasha White (most recently Lurene in Redwood Curtain's Last Gas) is wonderfully brittle and controlled as the perfectly-coiffed Wren Robin, the society's events chairwoman and chief orchestrator of the breakfast feast, who revels in her role as first quiche taster. Buildings and Grounds Chairman Veronica “Vern” Schultz is forcefully brought to life by Jo Kuzelka (Jo March in Ferndale Rep's Little Women: The Musical), as she proudly shows off all the security measures she's incorporated into the building — including enough food to feed all the society's members for four years (and, of course, chickens to provide those eggs).

Dale Prist (Jennifer Trustem, in her debut at Redwood Curtain) is delightful as the society's historian and designated event photographer who has not spoken to a man since she was 3 years old; she's also a closet athlete, which turns out to be something of a mixed blessing. Rose Andersen, also making her first appearance at Redwood Curtain, shows great comic timing as the enthusiastic and rather inept secretary Ginny Cadbury, although her English accent wobbles a little at times.

Rounding out the slate of officers is Megan Johnson (last seen at Redwood Curtain as Dolly in One Man, Two Guv'nors) as the regal society president, Lulie Stanwyck. A stickler for procedure, she proudly leads the members in several rousing choruses of Once, Twice, Three Times a Lady to remind us just why the “all manners” part of the motto is so important.

Director Shea King builds on the skills evident in her directorial assistance on Redwood Curtain's masterful production of Equivocation last year, deftly developing these five very different characters and delivering humor and satire in equal measure. Hanah Toyoda's set design is a perfect re-creation of the environment in which a group of ladies with societal aspirations would have met in the 1950s, elegantly integrating the bomb shelter door into the salon atmosphere of the breakfast room. The pressed white table cloth, matching floral napkins and ladylike silverware are, of course, covered by a sheet of protective plastic.

Jared Sorenson's sound design is dramatic, pulling the audience inside the atomic alert, and his lighting is appropriately atmospheric. But the crowning glory of the production is the costume design by Bethany Lamoureux — stiff-skirted tea frocks, delicate gloves, perfectly polished shoes — all color-coordinated and keyed to the personality of each character.

Jo Kuzelka, Megan Johnson, Natasha White and Rose Andersen in Five Lesbians Eating a Quiche, playing through July 30 at Redwood Curtain Theatre.

Five Lesbians started life as a skit performed at the 2010 Sketchbook Festival, and graduated to a fully-fledged performance piece the following year. It's a droll little play that packs some serious punches into its 65 minutes — stressing not only how far we've come in 60 years, but also, in some ways, how little we have learned.

Oh, and take a look at the photograph on the wall of the set as you leave the theatre, purportedly a portrait of the society's founder, Lady Monmont. If you're a regular aficionado of the Humboldt theatre scene, her face will likely be familiar to you. It's a clever touch, and a welcome nod to a local theatrical talent.

Five Lesbians Eating a Quiche shows Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights through July 30. Call 443-7688 or visit www.redwoodcurtain.com.

Upcoming

Plays in the Park brings a wild, comic opera to Redwood Park starting July 15. Expect snake oil, romance and mistaken identity from Le Docteur Miracle. From July 15-30. Call 834-0861 or visit playsinthepark.net for more information.

From July 21 through Aug. 13, North Coast Repertory Theatre presents Moon over Buffalo, a backstage comedy about theater actors in a tizzy over a Hollywood director Frank Capra's visit to their show. All 442-6278 or visit www.ncrt.net.

The Arcata Playhouse and Humboldt Made are teaming up to put on Humboldt's first ever Fermentation Festival The Humboldt Fervor Fest!

That's right. On August 13th we'll be celebrating all things fermented, cider, kombucha, beer, wine and distilled spirits oh my, sauerkraut, pickles, kimchi, bread, cheese, and so much more!!

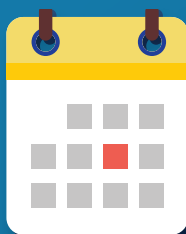

This oneofakind festival celebrates the alchemy behind many of our favorite foods and beverages. The Creamery District streets will be packed with over forty producers, offering samples of their fermented delicacies. In addition to discovering new tastes, there are learning opportunities, demonstrations for those who are interested in fermenting at home and an arts and crafts market with local music to get your dance on. All proceeds go to Playhouse Arts to help support their extensive arts and culture programming and to Humboldt Made to support the marketing and branding services they provide our local makers and producers. These two nonprofits work tirelessly to create a more creative and sustainable local economy.

Letting the Days Go By

By Andy Powell

thesetlist@northcoastjournal.com

A memory from the 20th century recently found its way back into my mind. During my somewhat unremarkable final two years in high school, I was able to leave campus for lunch. This was a big deal for us upperclassmen. It was also a prime time for many students to get in their cars and crank up their music.

Apparently, this was a near universal urge among us teenagers. As we'd be waiting to leave the parking lot, you'd hear the latest rock hits (STP, Nirvana, Smashing Pumpkins, Blind Melon, Crash Test Dummies, Live, etc.), the current pop, "punk" and rap tracks (nothing comes to mind), and of course a fair share of Zeppelin, Floyd, Van Halen, AC/DC, Stones, Sabbath and, occasionally, the first movement of Ludwig van's 5th from my retro outcast comrades. With all this different music cranking out of our cars, the parking lot quickly became a messy melange of different tempos, beats and sounds. But that wasn't the point.

The point was to show off what you listened to, to tell the world — or at least the few hundred students idling in their cars — what "good music" really was. It was a high volume artistic declaration, and a sonic value judgment. Turn up Zep's "Achilles' Last Stand" and drown out the inferior pop crap coming out of the homecoming king/mouth-breathing quarterback's much nicer car. But that was high school right?

This memory came rushing back to me as I was lucky enough to be sitting out on the banks of Bass Lake by Yosemite last week. It was probably around 7:30 a.m. — about three hours before I'd wanted to awake — but due to some Jabroni's need to blast some rap from his speedboat, I was already halfway through my first cup of coffee watching the formerly still waters of the lake.

As cranky as I usually am, this didn't completely bother me, as I had a full day of nothing in my plans. I was more interested in catching a glimpse of this nautical-rhyme lover. Although I couldn't tell exactly from the distance, it appeared to be a male (isn't it always?) in his mid-30s, with a tank top and sunglasses. Nothing too surprising there. I imagined he was sipping some Cristal and there may or may not have been bikini-clad admirers fawning over his badassery, but then again, this was still my first cup of coffee.

While looking at this baller's boat, my mind's eye saw a sun baked parking lot with teens in four-wheeled mobile stereos forcing their music on the world. We get older, and some of us are able to turn our high school diplomas into jobs that earn us enough money to buy a boat. But outside of that, perhaps, not much changes.

Thursday

The Humboldt Folklife Society's Folklife Festival has been in full swing this week, but you still have a few days left to catch the remaining shows and, for you bluegrass fans, tonight's a good night to get up to Blue Lake. Bluegrass Night starts around 6 p.m. at Dell'Arte with the aptly titled Thursday Night Bluegrass Band along with the Striped Pig String Band. It's also a special night as The Compost Mountain Boys are celebrating their Silver Anniversary (25 years pickin') so make sure you celebrate with them tonight. It's a $10 cover tonight, but bring some extra cash for beer.

Friday

Blue Lake's still swingin' tonight and not only can you make some pints disappear, but while doing so you'll have a soundtrack provided by locals The Vanishing Pints, who'll be playing some inspired Irish tunes for your imbibing. They'll be on close to 6 p.m. and this one's free (not the beer, however). Up from Stockton, Hardly Deadly will be at The Jam in Arcata tonight around 9 p.m. As you can probably tell by the name, they're a Grateful Dead tribute band, and are smartly stopping by Humboldt tonight. Just $6 to get your Dead on. Another tribute band will be playing for you, but it's not your usual tribute to a specific band but, rather, to the Back to the Future film trilogy. The Flux Capacitors, named after that crucial gadget in Doc Brown's DeLorean DMC-12, are not only from "Hill Valley, CA" — trivia note: Petaluma was originally considered to be the Hill Valley in the films — but they have the costumes down. The band is comprised of Marty McFly on vocals, his father George on keyboards, the abovementioned Doc on guitar, Griff Tannen on bass, and Marty's girlfriend Jennifer on drums. Expect to hear "The Power of Love" and other smash hits from the '80s. Will the band arrive in a DeLorean? It's possible. They've done it before for previous gigs. Start time is 9 p.m. and it's a free show to catch this "official Back to the Future-themed '80s band" at the Blue Lake Casino and Hotel. At the same time, you'll find Mighty Quinn & The Oakland Rōnin bringing the punk rock at the Little Red Lion Cocktail Lounge in Eureka tonight. From what I can tell from chatting with Mighty Quinn, these guys will play originals but will also slip in some classic punk songs. So for you Iggy & the Stooges fans, this is the place to be tonight. Not sure if this is a free show or not, but it'll be worth it.

Probably awash in tie dye, Dead tribute band Hardly Deadly will play the Jam Friday at 9 p.m. for a $6 cover. Courtesy of the artist

Saturday

Today is the finale for the Folklife Festival and they close things out with the All-Day Free Festival in and around Dell'Arte, starting around 10:45 a.m. on two stages and going late into the evening. Wander around and bounce between the stage in the amphitheater and the street stage for a plethora of local artists giving you what they got for free. Wear sunscreen and pace yourself on the day drinking, folks. There are kids around so keep it classy. Tired of acoustic based folk music? Well, a rare three-band bill hits the Alibi tonight at a rare time of 10 p.m. with an equally rare cover of $7. From San Francisco comes Golden Void with rockers from Visalia, Slow Season and from farther down South, Monarch, out of Encinitas. Get ready to rock Judases, and have some caffeine ahead of time.

Sunday

The Lighthouse Bar and Grill hosts local musician Tony Roach this evening at 5 p.m. for a free show. A little later in Arcata, it's Jazz Night at Blondie's Food and Drink at 7 p.m., so tonight gives you two good mellow options.

Tuesday

Continue your jazz fix tonight at Six Rivers Brewery in McKinleyville at 8 p.m. with Sunny Brae Jazz for free. Leave a tip, show your appreciation. Bluegrass banshee Billy Strings will be at Humboldt Brews tonight at 9 p.m. A fast pickin' Michagan-der who brings a bit of punk energy to the Americana sound, he isn't afraid to write mountain songs about meth ("Dust in a Baggie") which may be why he's coming through Humboldt County. There's a $10 cover charge for this show, which should be enough to keep the meth heads away.

Wednesday

I've never been cool enough to know where The Bat Cave is, although I've heard from a few friends who have checked out some good shows there in the past. So with that said, if you're in the know, you'll find "Brooklyn-based experimental/classically-influenced art pop trio" Half Waif at the Cave, joined by Pinegrove and Sports. I'm not sure when the show starts or how much it costs but, by this point, you probably aren't surprised.

Full show listings in the Journal's Music and More grid, the Calendar and online. Bands and promoters, send your gig info, preferably with a high-res photo or two, to music@northcoastjournal.com.

Pokémon isn't the only thing kids like that starts with "P." The Eureka Symphony's Peter and the Wolf is back at Dell'Arte's Carlo Theatre, July 17 at 11 a.m. and 12:30 p.m. (free, first-come first-serve basis), with the popular "Instrument Petting Zoo" at 10 a.m. at the amphitheater. Kids can touch and hear instruments before the show, then hear them "come alive" in the performance.

Summer Arts and Music Festival is over and Reggae isn't here yet. Maintain your SoHum summer music high with the Northern Nights Music Festival, happening July 15-17 at Cooks Valley Campground (see www.northernnights.org for ticket prices). Enjoy three days of fun, four stages of DJs and live bands, a river to float down, tall trees to look up at, vendors, food and more.

Sometimes big things happen here in quiet ways. For instance, did you know that former chair of the National Endowment of the Arts and California's current Poet Laureate Dana Gioia will read poetry and lecture on July 18 at 7 p.m. at Immanuel Lutheran Church in Eureka (free)? Now you do. He'll be joined by James McCubbrey of Eureka High School, Humboldt County's Poetry Out Loud champion.

Humboldt is Burning

All that glitters is not gold? Really now, Mr. Shakespeare. We know you knew a thing or two about drag. And, as you like it, so do we.

Get ready, loyal subjects. Royalty reigns at the Bayside Grange this Saturday, July 16 when kings, queens and in-betweens take to the stage at Humboldt's Inaugural Drag Pageant at 9 p.m. ($10). We've had drag shows here before, but this is the first time gender illusionist beauties and baddies will strut their stuff in stilettos and scruff to determine who sashays away with the title of Ms. Drag Queen Humboldt and Mr. Drag King Humboldt.

Competing kings and queens, including April Shower, Mr. Mustachio, Mercedes St. James, Hugh Johnson and Annie Hart, will duke it out in Formal Wear, Talent and Q&A rounds under the scrutiny of the judges: The Ninja from KISS FM, former (but forever) Rutabaga Queen Monica Topping, and Queer Humboldt's Todd Larsen.

The evening's emcees, Jamie Bondage and Anita Lemonparty, keep things hilarious or disciplined – depending on what's needed – and DJs Anya and Joe-E provide tunes for the evening. Proceeds from the event go to PFLAG, Humboldt Pride, and Out and Proud in Humboldt Productions. The event is 18 and up with beer and mixed drinks available for 21+.

School of Hard Knocks

We love our clowns in Humboldt. They're artsy and political. Funny and serious. Schooled in Commedia dell'Arte, our clowns entertain us while elevating our consciousness. And so it is with our neighboring clowns. When these characters come to town, we go to hear their message, too.

The San Francisco Mime Troupe brings its current show, Schooled, to the Mateel Community Center on Saturday, July 16 at 8 p.m. ($22, $20 members). The original musical comedy by the Tony-award-winning group explores relevant issues of race, economics and politics.

Wanting to change the deplorable conditions at her son's new school, a mother challenges the status quo that puts up with outdated textbooks, crumbling classrooms and the racist treatment of kids like hers. She meets resistance in the form of the long-serving, fairly myopic history/civics/American government/basketball coach at the school (we've all had one of these, right?); an "efficiency expert" with Wall Street ties and potentially sinister plans; and the school board with its agenda.

What will become of the school and its students? Can public education in the U.S. find a way to put students first? The talented performers of the San Francisco Mime Troupe tackle these questions and more. It's socially relevant theater of the highest professional quality with plenty of laughs to wash it down. Doors open at 7 p.m. with Mime Troupe band at 7:30 and curtain at 8.

Dating Secrets

Mike and Dave
bring the laughs,
Pets falls flat

By John J. Bennett

filmland@northcoastjournal.com

MIKE AND DAVE NEED WEDDING

DATES. As I've said time and time again, R-rated comedy is a risky genre. Banking on the strength or audacity of the material, it forsakes all the families and summer-break teenagers who seem to be the primary drivers of the movie industry. And because awards shows are myopic and awfully stuffy, comedies aren't likely to fare well in any of them. So, in order to succeed, these movies have to strike a balance of new, surprising jokes — and, more often than not, new ways to challenge the censors — a likable cast and a plot that doesn't show through too much at the seams. They rely on an intentional audience, ticket-buyers with at least some idea of what they're getting into, more than on the bored or those in need of child-care.

From the perspective of a Hollywood bean-counter, or maybe even more so from that of an executive with eyes on a billion-dollar box office and a nine-figure bonus package, that could be too unlikely an investment to risk. That such movies exist at all is enough to give some minor twinge of hope that creativity and humor have not yet been ground up by the great money excavator. More to the point, the genuinely funny ones are a source of hope. A little unexpectedly, Mike and Dave Need Wedding Dates is a very funny one indeed (despite the clunky title).

Mike (Adam Devine) and Dave (Zac Efron) Stangle are fun-loving, if reckless, brothers of semi-indeterminate age. Because even comedy protagonists need a visible means of financial support and because it sets up a cute opening scene, they also make their living selling liquor to saloons. More to the point, they have a tendency to turn festive occasions and family gatherings into crisis situations. So when baby sis Jeanie (Sugar Lyn Beard) starts planning her Hawaiian destination wedding, she and the parents stage an intervention. Hoping to curb her brothers' exuberance, the family insists they both bring suitable dates to the wedding. The boys have no idea how to meet nice women, though, so they start with a Craigslist ad offering an all-expenses paid vacation for the right candidates.

Trump said what?

This garners them some minor local fame, including a guest spot on a TV talk show, the opportunity for an awkward first-dates montage, and the attention of Tatiana (Aubrey Plaza) and Alice (Anna Kendrick). Alice is recovering from being left at the altar by drinking, smoking weed, gobbling pills and, generally, not attempting to recover at all. Tatiana is more than happy to go along for the ride and, in the wake of their both getting fired, sees Mike and Dave as marks for a relatively harmless grift. She and Alice sober up, cut their hair, change out of their filthy sweat-pants and con the brothers into believing they are nice girls. It works, of course, and the four-some soon sets off to Hawaii to hopefully not destroy Jeanie's special day.

First time feature director Jake Szymanski, a Funny or Die and SNL veteran who helmed the hilarious HBO movie 7 Days in Hell (2015), finds the funny in what could easily become a too-familiar scenario. His sense of timing is impeccable, so even jokes that appear to telegraph their punchlines are able to land big. Credit is due, obviously, to his cast, all of which shows admirable commitment to character and a vital, unique sense of comedy. Their chemistry allows the movie to breathe a little between the frequent laugh-out-loud moments, and the cast members invest their characters with authentic flaws and baggage. As much as the movie revels in watching these characters go down in flames, it also makes it clear that they are all self-aware and insecure, that they take no joy in constantly screwing up. But don't worry, Mike and

Dave focuses pretty squarely on delivering laughs. The contemplative emotional stuff just provides a nice sense of balance. And it all coheres to make this, undoubtedly, the funniest movie I've seen this year. R. 138M. BROADWAY, FORTUNA, MILL CREEK.

THE SECRET LIFE OF PETS. A few paragraphs ago, I was bitching about uninspired "family-friendly" movies that exist only to make money and give parents and their children a brief reprieve from one another. This feels an awful lot like one of those. In my defense, I was more than willing to enjoy it, particularly considering the cast: Louis C.K., Jenny Slate, Kevin Hart, Albert Brooks, Bobby Moynihan, Hannibal Buress, Steve Coogan, Ellie Kemper, Eric Stonestreet and Dana Carvey. It's like a contemporary comedy All-Star team. But due to a lack of risk and imagination, it amounts to significantly less than the sum of its parts.

Max (C.K.), our protagonist, is a tiny dog who lives in an apartment in New York City and is showered with affection by his owner. But then one day she brings home a big, oafish rescue dog named Duke (Stonestreet). The two dogs don't exactly hit it off, and their conflict soon takes them far afield in the city. Set upon by street cats, pursued by animal control and, eventually, at odds with an army of vengeful vigilante animals led by a rabbit named Snowball (Hart), Max and Duke are forced to reconcile their differences and try to get home, together.

There are some cute, heartfelt moments within The Secret Life of Pets, also very little in the way of secrets or surprises or laughs. It's an animated movie about dogs with, sadly, little more than that to offer. It grossed more than $100 million in its opening weekend. PG. 98M. BROADWAY, FORTUNA, MILL CREEK.

Previews

GHOSTBUSTERS. Swap in four funny women — Kate McKinnon, Leslie Jones, Kristen Wig and Melissa McCarthy — for the old gang, and a slick CGI Slimer for that loveable if antiquated ball of Ectoplasm, and you pretty much know the drill. Just make sure not to cross the streams. PG13. 117M. BROADWAY, MILL CREEK.

THE INFILTRATOR. A U.S. customs official (Bryan Cranston) goes undercover to investigate Columbian drug kingpin Pablo Escobar. Spoiler: Walter White's kind of a narc. R. 127M. BROADWAY.

Continuing

THE BFG. Steven Spielberg's animated adaptation of the Roald Dahl children's story brims with wonder and possibility. While it droops toward the end, the magical premise and escapist joy of the first act endures. PG. 120M. BROADWAY, FORTUNA, MILL CREEK.

CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE. This buddy/spy comedy has a serviceable story about a former dweeb who becomes a ripped CIA operative (Duane Johnson) and a popular guy disappointed with his adult life (Kevin Hart). But the leads' chemistry and charm makes going to the reunion worth it. PG13. 107M. BROADWAY, MILL CREEK.

FINDING DORY. Ellen DeGeneres voices the friendly fish with the fried short-term memory (anybody relate?) who's searching for the rest of her long lost blue tang clan. With Albert Brooks and Ed O'Neill. PG. 97M. BROADWAY, FORTUNA, MILL CREEK.

FREE STATE OF JONES. Matthew McConaughey, Gugu Mbatha-Raw and Mahershala Ali star in a Civil War action drama about white farmers and slaves forming an armed rebellion against the Rebels. Don't wear your Skynyrd T-shirt with the Confederate flag. R. 139M. BROADWAY, MILL CREEK.

INDEPENDENCE DAY: RESURGENCE.

Another alien invasion brings back most of the old crew (Bill Pullman, Jeff Goldblum, and hey, Vivica Fox) and some young'uns (Liam Hemsworth, Jessie T. Usher) to defend the earth, if not its architecture. PG13. 120M. BROADWAY, FORTUNA, MILL CREEK.

LEGEND OF TARZAN. After his Victorian makeover, Tarzan (Alexander Skarsgård) reverts to his chest-pounding ways to rescue his bride from a Belgian baddie. PG13. 87M. BROADWAY, FORTUNA, MILL CREEK.

THE NEON DEMON. Director Nicholas Winding Refn's film about an ingénue (Elle Fanning) modeling in Los Angeles is a vicious fever dream about beauty, hate and envy with a signature graphic climax. R. 117M. BROADWAY.

NOW YOU SEE ME 2. But maybe you don't have to. This sequel about do-gooder magicians can't pull the same rabbit out of its hat as the original, despite a charming ensemble cast and fancy illusions. Starring Mark Ruffalo, Morgan Freeman and Daniel Radcliffe. PG13. 115M. BROADWAY.

THE PURGE: ELECTION YEAR. So they're still making these. This one has Leo (Frank Grillo) running the gauntlet with an anti-anual-murderous-free-for-all politician (Elizabeth Mitchell). R. 139M. BROADWAY, MILL CREEK.

THE SHALLOWS. Blake Lively plays a surfer trapped by a shark close to shore. It's entertaining and Lively is up to the challenge, but the story could use more bite. PG13. 87M. BROADWAY, MILL CREEK.

SWISS ARMY MAN. Paul Dano and Daniel Radcliffe give humane, hilarious performances in this weird yet painfully relatable buddy movie (filmed in Humboldt, no less) about a stranded man and a corpse. R. 117M. BROADWAY.

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF LAURIE JEANNE ANDERSON WAINWRIGHT, also known as LAURIE WAINWRIGHT, also known as LAURIE ANDERSON CASE NO. PR160192

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, LAURIE JEANNE ANDERSON WAINWRIGHT, also known as LAURIE WAINWRIGHT, also known as LAURIE ANDERSON

A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by Petitioner, George J. Wainwright

In the Superior Court of California, County of Humboldt. The petition for probate requests that George J. Wainwright be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent. THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority. A HEARING on the petition will be held on July 14, 2016 at 2:00 p.m. at the Superior Court of California, County of Humboldt, 825 Fifth Street, Eureka, in Dept.: 8. IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code. Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law. YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk. ATTORNEY FOR PETITIONER: Thomas B. Hjerpe, Esq. Law Offices of Hjerpe & Collins, LLP 350 E Street, First Floor Eureka, CA 95501 (707)442-7262 June 20, 2016 SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA COUNTY OF HUMBOLDT

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF MACLYN HOWARD McCLARY, also known as MACLYN McCLARY, also known as MAC McCLARY CASE NO. PR160196

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, MACLYN HOWARD McCLARY, also known as MACLYN McCLARY, also known as MAC McCLARY A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by Petitioner, ANN C. McCLARY

In the Superior Court of California, County of Humboldt. The petition for probate requests that ANN C. McCLARY be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent. THE PETITION requests the decedent's will and codicils, if any, be admitted to probate. The will and any codicils are available for examination in the file kept by court.

A HEARING on the petition will be held on July 21, 2016 at 2:00 p.m. at the Superior Court of California, County of Humboldt, 825 Fifth Street, Eureka, in Dept.: 8. IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. T.S. No. 039974-CA APN: 021-273-017-000 NOTICE OF TRUSTEES SALE

Pursuant to CA Civil Code 2923.3 IMPORTANT NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: YOU ARE IN DEFAULT UNDER A DEED OF TRUST, DATED 9/8/2009. UNLESS YOU TAKE ACTION TO PROTECT YOUR PROPERTY, IT MAY BE SOLD AT A PUBLIC SALE. IF YOU NEED AN EXPLANATION OF THE NATURE OF THE PROCEEDING AGAINST YOU, YOU SHOULD CONTACT A LAWYER On 8/26/2016 at 11:00 AM, CLEAR RECON CORP., as duly appointed trustee under and pursuant to Deed of Trust recorded 9/15/2009, as Instrument No. 2009-20983-8, and later modified by a Loan Modification Agreement recorded on 01/19/2016, as Instrument 2016-001567-7, of Official Records in the office of the County Recorder of Humboldt County, State of CALIFORNIA executed by: JAMES R. BROWN AND SUSAN BROWN, HUSBAND AND WIFE AS COMMUNITY PROPERTY WILL SELL AT PUBLIC AUCTION TO HIGHEST BIDDER FOR CASH, CASHIERS CHECK DRAWN ON A STATE OR NATIONAL BANK, A CHECK DRAWN BY A STATE OR FEDERAL CREDIT UNION, OR A CHECK DRAWN BY A STATE OR FEDERAL SAVINGS AND LOAN ASSOCIATION, SAVINGS ASSOCIATION, OR SAVINGS BANK SPECIFIED IN SECTION 5102 OF THE FINANCIAL CODE AND AUTHORIZED TO DO BUSINESS IN THIS STATE: IN THE FRONT ENTRANCE OF THE HUMBOLDT COUNTY COURTHOUSE, 825 5TH STREET, EUREKA, CA 95501 all right, title and interest conveyed to and now held by it under said Deed of Trust in the property situated in said County and State described as: MORE FULLY DESCRIBED ON SAID DEED OF TRUST The street address and other common designation, if any, of the real property described above is purported to be: 1768 BLAKESLEE AVENUE ARCATA, CA 95521 The undersigned Trustee disclaims any liability for any incorrectness of the street address and other common designation, if any, shown herein. Said sale will be held, but without covenant or warranty, express or implied, regarding title, possession, condition, or encumbrances, including fees, charges and expenses of the Trustee and of the trusts created by said Deed of Trust, to pay the remaining principal sums of the note(s) secured by said Deed of Trust. The total amount of the unpaid balance of the obligation secured by the property to be sold and reasonable estimated costs, expenses and advances at the time of the initial publication of the Notice of Sale is: $240,029.61 If the

Trustee is unable to convey title for any reason, the successful bidder's sole and exclusive remedy shall be the return of monies paid to the Trustee, and the successful bidder shall have no further recourse. The beneficiary under said Deed of Trust heretofore executed and delivered to the undersigned a written Declaration of Default and Demand for Sale, and a written Notice of Default and Election to Sell. The undersigned caused said Notice of Default and Election to Sell to be recorded in the county where the real property is located. NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call (800) 280-2832 or visit this Internet Web site WWW.AUCTION.COM, using the file number assigned to this case 039974-CA. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the Internet Web site. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale. FOR SALES INFORMATION: (800) 280-2832 CLEAR RECON CORP. 4375 Jutland Drive Suite 200 San Diego, California 92117

NOTICE INVITING BIDS

1. Notice is hereby given that the Governing Board of the Freshwater Charter School District ("District"), of the County of Humboldt, State of California, will receive sealed bids for the Supply, Install and Commissioning of a Grid-Tied, 8.25 kW, Solar PV System Project ("Project") up to, but not later than, 3 p.m., on Thursday, August 4, 2016, and will thereafter publicly open and read aloud the bids. All bids shall be received at the office of Greenway Partners, located at 1385 8th Street, in Arcata, California 95521.
2. Each bid shall be completed on the Bid Proposal Form included in the Contract Documents, and must conform and be fully responsive to this invitation, the plans and specifications and all other Contract Documents. Copies of the Contract Documents are available for examination at the office of the Freshwater School District, County of Humboldt, California, and may be obtained by licensed contractors for free.
3. Each bid shall be accompanied by cash, a cashier's or certified check, or a bidder's bond executed by a surety licensed to do business in the State of California as a surety, made payable to the District, in an amount not less than ten percent (10%) of the maximum amount of the bid. The check or bid bond shall be given as a guarantee that the bidder to whom the contract is awarded will execute the Contract Documents and will provide the required payment and performance bonds and insurance certificates within ten (10) days after the notification of the award of the Contract.
4. The successful bidder shall comply with the provisions of the Labor Code pertaining to payment of the generally prevailing rate of wages and apprenticeships or other training programs. The Department of Industrial Relations has made available the general prevailing rate of per diem wages in the locality in which the work is to be performed for each craft, classification or type of worker needed to execute the Contract, including employer payments for health and welfare, pension, vacation, apprenticeship and similar purposes. Copies of these prevailing rates are available to any interested party upon request and are online at <http://www.dir.ca.gov/DLSR>. The Contractor and all Subcontractors shall pay not less than the specified rates to all workers employed by them in the execution of the Contract. It is the Contractor's responsibility to determine any rate change.
5. The schedule of per diem wages is based upon a working day of eight hours. The rate for holiday and overtime work shall be at least time and one half.
6. The substitution of appropriate securities in lieu of retention amounts from progress payments in accordance with Public Contract Code §22300 is permitted.
7. Pursuant to Public Contract Code §4104, each bid shall include the name and location of the place of business of each subcontractor who shall perform work or service or fabricate or install work for the contractor in excess of one-half of one percent (0.5%) of the bid price. The bid shall describe the type of the work to be performed by each listed subcontractor.
8. Minority, women, and disabled veteran contractors are encouraged to submit bids. This bid is not subject to Disabled Veteran Business Enterprise requirements.
9. The project is subject to compliance monitoring and enforcement by the California Department of Industrial Relations. In accordance with SB 854, all bidders, contractors and subcontractors working at the site shall be duly registered with the Department of Industrial Relations at time of bid opening and at all relevant times. Proof of registration shall be provided as to all such contractors prior to the commencement of any work.
10. Each bidder shall possess at the time the bid is awarded the following classification(s) of California State Contractor's license: Class B (General Building Contractor) or a Class C-46 (Solar Contractor) or a Class C-10 (California Electrical Contractor).
11. Bidders' Conference. A non-mandatory bidders' conference will be held at Freshwater School on Thursday, July 21, 2016 at 8:00 a.m. for the purpose of acquainting all prospective bidders with the Contract Documents and the Project site.

The Department of Industrial Relations has made available the general prevailing rate of per diem wages in the locality in which the work is to be performed for each craft, classification or type of worker needed to execute the Contract, including employer payments for health and welfare, pension, vacation, apprenticeship and similar purposes. Copies of these prevailing rates are available to any interested party upon request and are online at <http://www.dir.ca.gov/DLSR>. The Contractor and all Subcontractors shall pay not less than the specified rates to all workers employed by them in the execution of the Contract. It is the Contractor's responsibility to determine any rate change.
5. The schedule of per diem wages is based upon a working day of eight hours. The rate for holiday and overtime work shall be at least time and one half.
6. The substitution of appropriate securities in lieu of retention amounts from progress payments in accordance with Public Contract Code §22300 is permitted.
7. Pursuant to Public Contract Code §4104, each bid shall include the name and location of the place of business of each subcontractor who shall perform work or service or fabricate or install work for the contractor in excess of one-half of one percent (0.5%) of the bid price. The bid shall describe the type of the work to be performed by each listed subcontractor.
8. Minority, women, and disabled veteran contractors are encouraged to submit bids. This bid is not subject to Disabled Veteran Business Enterprise requirements.
9. The project is subject to compliance monitoring and enforcement by the California Department of Industrial Relations. In accordance with SB 854, all bidders, contractors and subcontractors working at the site shall be duly registered with the Department of Industrial Relations at time of bid opening and at all relevant times. Proof of registration shall be provided as to all such contractors prior to the commencement of any work.
10. Each bidder shall possess at the time the bid is awarded the following classification(s) of California State Contractor's license: Class B (General Building Contractor) or a Class C-46 (Solar Contractor) or a Class C-10 (California Electrical Contractor).
11. Bidders' Conference. A non-mandatory bidders' conference will be held at Blue Lake School on Wednesday, July 13, 2016 at 8:00 a.m. for the purpose of acquainting all prospective bidders with the Contract Documents and the Project site.

Non-random Random Primes

By Barry Evans

fieldnotes@northcoastjournal.com

This is the story of how a curious coin-tossing paradox led a pair of Stanford University mathematicians to find an unexpected property of prime numbers, a quirk in full view that had gone unnoticed. First, the paradox: Alice tosses a coin until she sees a head followed by a tail (H-T); Bob tosses until he sees two heads (H-H). Who gets the desired result first? Oddly (despite H-T and H-H having the same probability), on average Alice will get her H-T combo in four tosses, while it will take Bob six to get H-H. Why? Because if Alice fails — if she gets a head followed by a head — she has an even chance of getting her H-T combo the next toss. But if Bob fails, getting a head followed by a tail, he's at least two tosses away from getting his H-H combo.

When Stanford University mathematician and prime-number maven Kannan Soundararajan heard this tidbit at a lecture, he wondered if something similar might happen with the last digits of two consecutive primes: Would some combinations be favored more than others? (Prime numbers can only be divided by themselves and one; they're the building blocks of mathematics, equivalent to elements in the real world.) Any prime greater than 5 can only end in 1, 3, 7 or 9, since a number ending in an even number is divisible by 2, and numbers ending in 0 or 5 are divisible by 5. So the only possible combos for the last digits of two consecutive primes are the 16 pairs 1-1, 1-3, 1-7 all the way up to 9-3, 9-7, 9-9. Since primes are considered "pseudo-random," you might think that each pair has an equal chance of appearing 1/16, about 6.3 percent, of the time.

Wrong. When Soundararajan and his colleague Lemke Oliver checked the first

1-1 4.6%	1-3 7.4%	1-7 7.5%	1-9 5.4%
3-1 6.0%	3-3 4.4%	3-7 7.0%	3-9 7.5%
7-1 6.4%	7-3 6.8%	7-7 4.4%	7-9 7.4%
9-1 8.0%	9-3 6.4%	9-7 6.0%	9-9 4.6%

If the 16 possible last-digit pairs of consecutive prime numbers were distributed randomly, each would occur about 6.3 percent of the time. But same-digit pairs (yellow boxes) appear far less often than chance would predict.

Journal graphic

billion pairs of primes, they discovered huge anomalies. Turns out 1 is followed by another 1 (1-1) just 4.6 percent of the time; for 1-3 and 1-7, it's 7.4-7.5 percent, while 1-9 occurs about 5.4 percent of the time. The percentages are similar for the other 12 possible combos. Same-digit pairs 1-1, 3-3, 7-7 and 9-9 are particularly shunned — see the yellow diagonal line of boxes in the accompanying diagram. Who knew? No one, apparently. The title of Soundararajan and Oliver's paper (submitted to the arXiv preprint server March 11) says it all: "Unexpected biases in the distribution of consecutive primes."

"Unexpected" is putting it mildly. Even since Euclid proved 2,300 years ago that there's an infinite number of them, prime numbers have been the subject of intense scrutiny by the best and the brightest — without anyone stumbling upon this blow to randomness. A quick internet search shows the finding has sent number theorists scrambling. Soundararajan and Oliver suspect a link to an unproven hypothesis, the 1923 "Hardy-Littlewood k-tuple conjecture," which is way beyond my pay scale.

For now, this odd property of primes is essentially a mystery, or as Lemke Oliver told Nature, "What we know is embarrassingly little." Which, in an age that pretends at wisdom, is somehow comforting. Turns out we're still ignorant of some of the most basic facts of nature enshrined in our 1, 2, 3 number system.

Barry Evans (barryevans9@yahoo.com) is convinced he can understand the Riemann hypothesis if he just buys enough books on the subject.

Murphy's Congratulates Russ Dirksen

Murphy's would like to congratulate Russ Dirksen on his recent retirement. Russ has worked for North Coast Mercantile since 1978 and has been delivering to Murphy's ever since. "Russ has always been an honest, hardworking and upbeat sales rep," says long time Murphy's employee Carlos Avelar. "He is like family to us."

Russ was born and raised in Arcata. He attended Jacoby Creek, Arcata High and College of the Redwoods. He then served four years in the Navy before returning to Humboldt County to start work. Russ would like to thank his wife Zella and his family, Todd/Annie and Erin/Dustin and his three grandkids for always supporting him.

Russ would also like to thank Murphy's for their continued business. "I am glad that I am friends with the managers and staff. Murphy's will always be our grocery store and we will continue to support the stores," says Russ.

Congrats on your retirement from the entire Murphy's Family!
